EURUSD Market Insight

03/06/2026 06:07

The euro faces pressure after the ECB reported inflation rose to 2.4% in May, amid geopolitical tensions and a stronger U.S. dollar, with EUR/USD trading roughly flat.

The euro is under pressure following the European Central Bank's release of flash inflation data, which showed an increase to 2.4% in May from 2.2% in April. This rise indicates growing inflationary pressures that may negatively influence monetary policy decisions for the euro. Additionally, geopolitical tensions surrounding Iran and ongoing negotiations have added uncertainty, impacting market sentiment towards risk assets like the euro. This backdrop has coincided with a stronger U.S. dollar, contributing to EUR/USD trading in a roughly flat manner during the session, with minor fluctuations around Monday's close.
